US PRESIDENT IS SEEKING TO OUST GOVERNOR COOK

Trump's Fed gamble risks pushing bond rates higher

BLOOMBERG August 27

US PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP'S unprecedented and escalating attack on the Federal Reserve runs the risk of backfiring by hitting financial markets and the economy with higher long-term borrowing costs. For weeks, he has lambasted Chair Jerome Powell for not slashing interest rates deeply to stimulate the economy and — as Trump sees it — lower the government's debt bills.

He's already nominated the head of his Council of Economic Advisors to the central bank's board and is now seeking to oust Governor Lisa Cook, setting the stage for a legal battle over the institution's political autonomy.

Yet for all the Fed's power over short-term interest rates, it's the 10-year Treasury yield — set in real-time by traders around the world — that largely determines what Americans pay for trillions of dollars of mortgages, business loans and other debts.

And even as Powell signals he's ready to start easing monetary policy as soon as next month, those rates have been stubbornly high for other reasons: Tariffs are threatening to worsen still-elevated inflation; the budget deficit is poised to keep flooding the market with new Treasuries; and Trump's tax cuts may even deliver a jolt of stimulus next year.

Throw in fears that a Fed loyal to the president could cut rates too far, too fast — jeopardizing the central bank's inflation-fighting credibility in the process — and long-term rates could wind up even higher than they are now, squeezing the economy and potentially roiling other markets.

"The combination of weaker US payroll growth and the White House baiting of the Fed, both institutional and personal, is starting to create real issues for investors in US Treasuries," said David Roberts, head of fixed income at Nedgroup Investments, who expects long-term rates to rise even if short-term ones fall. "Inflation is running way above the Fed's target. Much cheaper money now would likely stoke a boom, a weaker US dollar, and materially higher inflation."

The pressure on long-term interest rates isn't unique to the US. They've been propped up in the UK, France and other countries by investors' worries about the same combination of high government debt loads and increasingly unpredictable policies.

But the crosscurrents of Trump's return to the White House have posed their own challenges. During last year's presidential campaign, when investors started betting on his victory, 10-year Treasury yields rose sharply even as the Fed started pulling its benchmark overnight rate back from a more than two-decade high. That's because investors were anticipating that the Republican's tax-cut and deregulation agenda would add fuel to what was, at the time, a surprisingly resilient economy.

Musk's lawyers to stop OpenAI obtaining papers from Meta

REUTERS August 27

LAWYERS FOR ELON Musk have asked a US judge to block ChatGPT-owner OpenAI from obtaining documents from Meta Platforms related to a previous $97.4 billion bid for OpenAI's assets, a court filing showed.

OpenAI said last week Musk had tried to enlist his rival Mark Zuckerberg in his bid for the AI company earlier this year, but that the Meta boss did not come on board.

OpenAI then requested the judge to order Meta to produce

Elon Musk

documents and communications related to any bid for the company. Meta asked the judge to deny the request, saying it should seek relevant documents directly from Musk and his AI startup xAI.

In a filing late on Tuesday, Musk's lawyers said OpenAI had already received documents related to the bid from him and his AI startup. They added that OpenAI's "expansive discovery" was irrelevant to the current phase of the trial.

However, lawyers for OpenAI and CEO Sam Altman asked the judge to reject Musk's assertions and said they were not seeking "expansive" and "sprawling" discovery and that the relevant requests for documents were targeted and "span weeks, not years."

Fed's Williams: Every meeting is 'live' for rates

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF New York President John Williams said the US central bank's policy meeting next month would be a "live" one, hinting at the possibility of an interest-rate move without saying what course of action he would support.

"I definitely think that every meeting is, from my perspective, live," Williams said on Wednesday in an interview. "We're getting the risks more in balance," he said, referring to the Fed's two mandates of maximum employment and stable prices.

Amazon Now to make up for lost time

THUS, IN A way, this could be a more pragmatic approach for Amazon as regulations add more complexity to the already operationally challenging segment. Singh added that since quick commerce often relies on company-run dark stores, Amazon must carefully structure operations to remain compliant and avoid the risk of being seen as holding inventory.

For its e-commerce, Amazon uses a network of strategically located fulfilment and micro-fulfilment centres that enable same-day or next-day shipping. However, for quick commerce, which is primarily still a grocery and fresh play, it is setting up separate dark stores that cover a radius of 2-3 km. To achieve city-wide coverage, a metro like Bengaluru (741 sq km) would need 26-59 dark stores, depending on whether each store covers a 3 km or 2 km radius. For Delhi (1,483 square km), about 53-118 stores would be required.

Jefferies said last month, "Specifically, on Amazon, we think these are early days, and the offering needs to have enough scale in terms of coverage to be a meaningful player in the overall quick commerce market. This may require serious effort, including burn, given Amazon lacks brand recall for q-commerce, unlike incumbents."

The challenges, experts note, become tougher if the company hasn't yet refined its clear value proposition and business model. "My guess is Amazon is refining the model and the customer proposition before scaling up. Because we know that scaling up a category or a new business is not a challenge for a giant like Amazon," Sandeep Murthy, managing partner, Lightbox, said.

According to sources, Amazon is evaluating a franchise model for its quick commerce vertical. Experts expect Amazon to scale through FY26 on store density, demand validation, and compliance fall into place. "By expanding in a phased manner, Amazon is balancing compliance, investment, and operational readiness before taking Amazon Now to more cities," Singh added. Notably, even before launching e-commerce in India in 2013, Amazon took time to get the categories and the supply chain right. "Amazon is known for endurance and thinking in a decades-long approach, backed by capital. But with competitors already well established, execution speed will become critical," Brijesh Damodaran Nair, managing partner, Auxano Capital, said.

Besides, while first-movers have captured the lion's share of emerging markets, Amazon has the advantage of observing, learning, and designing for the q-commerce market that is set to triple by FY28, from around ₹64,000 crore in FY25.

Domestic flyers at Navi Mumbai...

THE AIRPORTS ECONOMIC Regulatory Authority (AERA) determined UDF of ₹1,500 for international and ₹840 for domestic passengers flying out of Navi Mumbai for FY26. The fees are among the highest in the country. At Kannur airport, domestic flyers pay ₹850 and international passengers ₹1,798. At Thiruvananthapuram, domestic UDF is ₹840 and international ₹1,680, and in Chandigarh the fees are ₹725 and ₹1,550 respectively.

At the Delhi airport, departing domestic passengers pay ₹129 as UDF and international flyers pay ₹650 or ₹810 depending on flying category. The Navi Mumbai airport is set start commercial operations from November with both international and domestic flights starting together, according to Adani Airport Holdings (AAHL) executives. The steep UDF will pose a challenge for airlines to price their tickets attractively.

AAHL controls seven operational airports, including the Mumbai airport, and one under construction airport. It has a market share of nearly 25% of India's domestic passenger traffic, just behind market leader GMRAirports, which runs Delhi and other airports.

AAHL proposes to infuse over ₹57,000 crore for the creation of a variety of supporting facilities at NMIA including a second runway, a second terminal building, automated people movers which will connect the two terminals. The steep UDF at NMIA will be followed shortly by a likely upward revision of the same at three other airports run by AAHL—Lucknow, Ahmedabad, Thiruvananthapuram—by the end of FY26. UDFs typically decrease in the long run when the funds for erecting supporting assets for an airport is raised.

"We will get a revised tariff order in March 2026 for Lucknow, Ahmedabad and Thiruvananthapuram and fewer more will come up later," Bansal said.

Another front opens: H-1B visa 'total scam'

HE SAID IT allows companies to replace American workers with foreign labour.

During an interview on Fox News, DeSantis claimed that companies often train American workers alongside H-1B visa holders, only to lay off the Americans and hire the foreign workers. This practice, he said, is unacceptable and hurts American workers.

Asked by anchor Laura Ingraham on the divide in the Trump cabinet over the issue of H-1B visas, DeSantis said, "I think you are right to say the H-1B... has become a total scam. These firms game the system. Some of these companies are laying off large numbers of Americans while also hiring new H-1B workers and renewing existing H-1B visas. Often, people used to say, 'We are getting the cream of the crop from all around the world.' The reality is that's not actually what H-1Bs are."

He contested the notion that the H-1B programme attracts the "best and brightest" talent, suggesting instead that it has become a system that benefits a specific industry, largely dominated by workers from one country. "Most of them (H-1Bs) are from one country, India, there's a cottage industry about how all those people make money off this system."

With artificial intelligence increasingly displacing young workers, DeSantis questioned why the US should import more foreign labour instead of prioritising its own citizens.

"Why would we be importing foreign workers when we have our own people that we need to take care of?" he said.

Lutnick claimed there is strong interest in the programme, with 250,000 people supposedly waiting in line, and potentially generating $1.25 trillion in revenue.

In January, backing the H-1B visa programme, US President Donald Trump had said the country needs "very competent" and "great" people, and this is possible through this visa programme.

Indians are the biggest beneficiaries of the H-1B visas. Between October 2022 and September 2023, 72% of the nearly 400,000 visas issued under the H-1B programme went to Indian nationals. During the same period, top four Indian IT majors with a presence in the US—Infosys, TCS, HCL and Wipro—obtained approval for around 20,000 employees to work on H-1B visas, according to the latest US Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) data.

Tariff blow: Listing gains drop 50% from last year

HALDEA ALSO SAID that the weak sentiment has prompted companies to price IPOs at more reasonable valuations this year. However, he warned that investor expectations of strong performance both on listing day and thereafter from every IPO are often misplaced.

Meanwhile, the IPO pipeline remains strong, with nearly 180 companies filing papers with the Sebi—or awaiting approval to raise over ₹3 lakh crore.

Companies, which gave listing-day gains of over 50% include Aditya Infotech, Prostarm Info Systems, Quality Power Electrical, Stallion India Fluorochemicals, Belrise Industries, and NSDL. Only nine companies are still trading below their issue price. These include Arisinfra Solutions, Laxmi Dental, and Laxmi India Finance.

On Tuesday (August 26), another four companies—Gem

Aromatics, Shreeji Shipping Global, Vikram Solar, and Patel Retail—debuted on the bourses. Patel Retail closed with a strong 13.6% gain, Vikram Solar rose 7.4%, Shreeji Shipping Global inched up 1%, while Gem Aromatics disappointed with a 1.8% decline.
